

Sustainability Blog

Written by Lisa Alexander
Wednesday, 15 September 2010 13:51 -

If you are looking for some after summer fun and sustainable education, come out to the Pennsylvania Renewable Energy & Sustainable Living Festival

on September 17, 18, & 19

th

, 2010 in Kempton, Pa. Kempton is in central Pennsylvania, close enough to get to from every major metro outlet in Pennsylvania and parts of Delaware, Maryland, and West Virginia.

It is a yearly event held at the Kempton Community Center that draws thousands of people looking for solid information on Sustainable Living. It's a 3 day festival about renewable energy, green building & design, sustainable agriculture, land-use planning, healthy living and so much more. There are national exhibitors, workshops and dynamic speakers including, yours truly. I will be speaking on Friday, September 17th at 4:00 pm and at noon on Saturday the 18th. I will be introducing one of my latest Projects, registered Project that will document the complete renovation of a 1920's farmhouse into a sustainable living educational center.

Project FarmHouse™

, a

LEED

There are prizes, free give-aways and some much to learn and see. Come join us for a fun & educational weekend! Hope to see you there !